CHRISTMAN TO LEAD NEW EARTHWORK DIVISION AT CORNERSTONE

Brookfield-based CornerStone Plumbing LLC has hired Scott Christman to manage its new Earthwork division, expanding the company's scope of services to include commercial excavation and grading.

Christman, 30, a former vice president at Western Contractors, New Berlin, will oversee and manage the development of the new Earthwork division of CornerStone, a commercial plumbing contractor celebrating its 15th year of operation in 2018.

With the introduction of its Earthwork division, CornerStone now becomes the sole contractor in the region offering excavation and grading, site utilities installation and interior plumbing system design/installation from a single source.

Christman is a certified civil/structural engineer and has held a variety of positions with southeastern Wisconsin construction contractors since receiving his engineering degree in 2010 from UW-Milwaukee. His experience includes construction supply chain management, project management and estimating.

"For 15 years, CornerStone has been known for unmatched quality, service and innovation" Christman said. "We'll bring those same characteristics to our excavation and grading work."

Founded in 2003 by company president Steve Adkins, CornerStone has been recognized as one of the area's fastest-growing commercial plumbing contractors and now employs more than 80. The company is a leader in the pre-fabrication of plumbing systems, which are engineered and assembled in the firm's 25,000-square-foot facility in Brookfield.
